

Mission Statement and Training Approach

Remington Pet Ranch dedicates itself:

- to improve the lives of dogs and their humans through thoughtful, science-based application of Positive Reinforcement Training
- to build our relationships with both our dog and human clients based on empathy, compassion, and understanding
- to foster a supportive community of dog lovers and professionals committed to ongoing education and collaboration.

Why Positive Reinforcement?

Remington Pet Ranch is deeply committed to employing positive reinforcement and force-free training methods for your beloved canine. Our dedication stems from a profound respect for the psychological and behavioral principles that govern dog learning and welfare.

For the last several decades, scientific research consistently demonstrates that positive reinforcement techniques, such as rewarding desired behaviors with treats, praise, or play, are highly effective in fostering lasting behavioral changes in dogs. These methods not only yield quicker results but also contribute to a stronger bond between the dog and their humans.

Furthermore, force-free training approaches prioritize the well-being and emotional state of the dog. Studies have shown that punitive methods, such as physical corrections or intimidation, can lead to fear, anxiety, and even aggression in dogs, undermining the trust and cooperation essential for successful training outcomes and for building positive relationships.

By embracing positive reinforcement and force-free training, we ensure that your dog's training experience is not only effective but also enjoyable and stress-free. We want your dog to look forward to training because your dog deserves the most compassionate and scientifically supported approach to learning.
